

FSU Standards Committee Tablet PC Recommendation

May, 24 2006

Purpose

Recommend a standard tablet PC model and configuration for users who have a need for functions that extend beyond the capability of the standard laptop.

Sub-committee members participating in this recommendation were, Eric Quilitzsch, Shawn Lagasse, Curtis Earl, Joe Strohkirch. Products tested included the IBM Lenovo X41, Toshiba Portege M400, and the HP tc4200.

Products also researched included the Fujitsu Life Book, and the Acer TravelMate.

and also includes tablet functions.

This group of convertibles was identified for their ability to perform as a fully functional laptop and tablet. This unit is comparable to the current PC Replacement Standard laptop,

The group is recommending Toshiba Portege M400. Key features that have been identified in selecting this model include, Track Pad Mouse, Biometric Scanner, Tablet Mode Usability, Robust Case Design, On-board Optical Drive.

This system seemed to perform better for all the users in the committee that worked with it. Others tested did not have Optical drives unless docked, Tablet functions got in the way while using in a laptop mode, and generally performed slower. This recommendation should provide direction until Dell releases their product some time this year. Information in the next column is from a quote for the Toshiba from CDWG.
